Export & Import Analysis By Country Analysis

- Five-Year Export Trend (2020–2024): Exports increased from 22.01M (2020) to 31.65M (2024) — a 43.81% rise, with 2024 contributing 18.32% of total five-year exports. This shows steady upward momentum and improved export capacity in recent years.

- Imports & Trade Balance (2020–2024): Imports ranged from 42.48M to 65.69M, consistently exceeding exports. The trade balance remained negative, fluctuating between -35.47M and -19.44M, indicating persistent structural import dependence despite export growth. Exports and imports show a positive correlation, meaning economic expansion increases both.

- Key Trade Partners (5-Year Pattern): The United States remained the largest export destination, supporting growth in high-value sectors like textiles and apparel. Meanwhile, China accounted for the largest share of imports, contributing significantly to the trade deficit.

- Export Strength & Import Pressure: Textiles remained the strongest export driver during these five years, while mineral products, machinery, and industrial inputs dominated imports — explaining why imports grew faster than exports.

High-Potential Export Markets (Based on 5-Year Trends):
- United States – Expand value-added textile and apparel exports.
- Germany – Technical textiles, surgical goods, and chemicals.
- United Arab Emirates – Food products and re-export trade hub.
- Saudi Arabia – Agriculture and construction-related exports.
- China – Opportunity to increase value-added exports to offset import imbalance.

Export & Import Analysis By Product Category

- Trade Flow Overview: Trade is highly category-dependent, with a clear positive link between export performance and trade balance. Over the past five years, exports have been driven primarily by a few strong sectors, while heavy reliance on certain import categories has widened the trade deficit.

- Strong Export & Major Import Categories: Textiles and Textile Articles Recorded the highest export value (31.65M in 2024) and the largest trade surplus (225.62M), making it the backbone of exports. In contrast, Mineral Products showed the largest deficit (-248.24M), reflecting heavy imports of petroleum and industrial raw materials. Consistent Export Strength (5-Year Trend): Textiles remained the most stable and growing export sector, followed by Agricultural Products and Chemicals & Pharmaceuticals, which show steady growth and diversification potential in global markets.

- Import Dependence Areas: Mineral Products, Machinery & Electronics, and Metals contribute most to the trade deficit due to energy dependence, limited domestic industrial capacity, and high demand for industrial equipment.

- Strategic Focus Forward: Expand value-added exports in Textiles, Agriculture, and Chemicals to strengthen surplus sectors, while promoting domestic production and alternative sourcing in Mineral Products and Machinery to reduce import dependency and improve the overall trade balance.

Export Opportunities:
- Textiles: Continue global market penetration; explore higher value-added products
- Agriculture & Food Products: Rising international demand; potential for niche markets (e.g., organic products)
- Chemicals & Pharmaceuticals: Potential for regional export expansion with improved production capacity

Import Substitution Focus:
- Mineral Products & Machinery: High import values indicate opportunities for domestic manufacturing or alternative sourcing
- Reducing reliance on key import-heavy categories could strengthen trade balance
